ReCharge New York (RNY) is a statewide economic development power program administered by the New York Power Authority (NYPA). The program provides power allocations to eligible applicants. RNY consists of equal parts low-cost hydropower and electricity purchased on the open market, and totals 910 megawatts. With contracts up to seven years, RNY provides a long-term, low-cost solution for businesses and not-for-profits to stay and grow in New York State.

Eligibility

- Large Businesses – minimum peak demand of 400 kilowatts (kW)

Ineligible

The goal of RNY is to create and retain jobs, and spur capital investment in the state. Applications are reviewed on a competitive basis. Applications are evaluated using 12 legislative criteria, including but not limited to:

- Significance of the cost of electricity to the applicant's total cost of doing business
- New capital investment in the state resulting from an allocation
- Consistency with regional economic development strategies and priorities
